AUSTRALIAN GOLD COIN A PRIZED COLLECTABLE

The 1852 Adelaide Pound has a unique place in Australia's history as the nation's very first gold coin, minted at the Government Assay Office in Adelaide. The coin is a national treasure: recognised worldwide as one of Australia's most prestigious rarities. The appeal of the Adelaide Pound is timeless. The production of the nation's first gold coin at the Government Assay Office was plagued with problems. Excessive pressure exerted during the early stages of the minting process cracked the reverse die in the DWT area of the legend. Approximately 40 – 50 Adelaide Pounds were however issued before the Crack was even noticed. We refer to it today as the 'Cracked Die' or Adelaide Pound Type 1.

A second die, prepared by die maker Joshua Payne, came into use and by adjusting and lowering the pressure on the dies during the minting process a further 24,000-plus Adelaide Pounds were struck. We refer to them as the Type 2 (or second die) Adelaide Pounds.

A point that is often overlooked in discussions about the Adelaide Pound is that the first and second reverse dies were very different: the first was prepared with a beaded inner circle, the second showed a crenellated inner circle. Very few Adelaide Pounds actually circulated. When it was discovered that the intrinsic value of the gold contained in each piece exceeded its nominal value, the vast majority were promptly exported to London by profiteers and melted down.

That goes a long way towards explaining why so few Adelaide Pounds survive today: approximately 30 to 40 of the Cracked Die and less than 200 struck from the second die.

Owning an example of Australia's very first gold coin, the 1852 Adelaide Pound, is for many collectors a lifetime's ambition. The coin is rare and only a handful would appear on the market annually.

Finding a quality Adelaide Pound is no easy task. Gold is a soft metal and the rigours of even minimal circulation have treated the majority of Adelaide Pounds harshly. Most of the coins that we see have serious knocks and obvious flaws that are clearly visible to the naked eye.

At a recent Auction this coin realized 60,000.

PRES CON >

I express my sincere apologies for the lateness of getting back to the meeting. AGAIN this will be closely watched in the future.

EXECUTIVE MEETING;

NOTE! No voting on any item took place.

Issues were brought forward on certain things that happened so that all would be aware.

Two were discussed hence being late.

AGM MEETING:

NOTE! No vote on any item took place.

Constitution; As shown to the membership I was ready to vote and had received two ballots and told the results of these ballots. It was explained to membership what happened in our AGM meeting. As a result no votes were taken, nothing was/would have been accepted due to lack of proper procedure to amend. As a result the clubs current constitution will stand in effect.

TO MEMBERSHIP: In the Dec News and mailings I submitted three options. Please keep current constitution Option #1 For your records to have. Will have couple copies available.
